Securities industry regulations require that brokerage firms inform their clients of their plans to address the possibility of a business disruption that potentially results from key types of scenarios: loss of technology, loss of workplace, loss of personnel or other events. TD Ameritrade has a comprehensive business continuity program in place, which is reviewed, updated and tested on a regular basis. The program is intended to maintain business operations such as processing client orders and transactions, providing access to cash and securities, and providing access to information about balances and transactions in client accounts.

Examples of how TD Ameritrade's plan addresses disruptions of varying scope and magnitude include:

- Disruption of service at any of our service centers may result in calls, orders, and electronic communications being rerouted to an alternative service center located in a different region of the country with a separate power grid and transportation system.
- In the event of a public health crisis that resulted in a high rate of employee absenteeism, TD Ameritrade's plan focuses available personnel on critical business functions that directly support client needs and financial markets. Additionally, we may enact our conditional work from home and/or workforce continuity plan, which includes social distancing and other policies to limit exposure.
- A significant disruption in our primary data center may result in the recovery of systems at an alternate data center. Our data centers are each supported by backup power generators and are located in different regions of the country with different power grids and transportation networks.

While no contingency plan can eliminate all risk of service interruption or temporarily impeded account access, we continually assess and update our plans to mitigate all reasonable risk. Any modifications to our plan will be reflected in this Business Continuity Plan Statement, which will be posted on our website, or you may obtain a current version of this Statement by writing us at TD Ameritrade, Inc., Compliance Department, P.O. Box 2148, Omaha, NE 68103-2148.
